Having developed a deep appreciation for Coral Gables and its international culture, Jon and his wife settled in the City Beautiful in 1992 to raise their family. The Sullenberger family has lived in their Historic 1926 home in Coral Gables for the past 31 years. Actively involved within the city and wider community, they consider their neighbors and friends key to their greater family experience.

Their sons were educated at local public and private schools; earned Eagle Scout designations through Coral Gables Troop 76; and served as Fire Explorers with the Coral Gables Fire Department.

Perpetually driven by a creative, entrepreneurial and dynamic spirit, Jon Sullenberger earned his four year degree in Culinary Arts and later acquired a Master Chef of Culinary Arts by the Ministry of Justice & Ecclesiastical Affairs in Iceland. In 1986, he and his wife moved to South Florida to further Jon's education and earn a Certificate in Hospitality Management at Florida International University.

Being an entrepreneur by nature, Jon founded and managed a successful international business for nearly three decades where his success was measured in the achievement of his clients' objectives, satisfaction and trust. He consistently trained his staff to take care of their clients, be honest and loyal to them. Jon expanded his client service expertise by becoming familiar with each client's individual needs and wants. He asked questions, listened to their answers and took positive action, intuitively gaining an understanding of their goals and objectives and responding with personalized solutions and services.

Jon seamlessly brings his education, experience, honesty and determination to the real estate industry. Adhering to core values instilled in him along the way contribute to his continued success. Whether it's a specific innovative marketing strategy for real estate sellers or formulating a success plan for real estate buyers, he is professional, committed to excellence and takes pride in all his efforts.

Keen market insight combined with well-developed knowledge of local/global economics, real estate and commerce spurred Jon to obtain his real estate license and affiliate with BERKSHIRE HATHAWAY EWM REALTY in Coral Gables Florida. As in all professional endeavors, he is client relationship focused, results-driven, highly resourceful, innovative and ethical. With an established reputation for his outreach, ethics and strong character, Jon has developed a wide regional, national and global network. Combined with personal dynamics, educational and professional history, Jon is destined for professional success in the field of real estate.

As a family-oriented resident of Coral Gables, it will be my pleasure to collaborate with you to fulfill your individual and/or family real estate essential specification.

As an attentive listener and responsive communicator with a dedicated focus on your real estate goals, I will personalize a strategic and constructive plan of action with you. My commitment is to deliver the highest level of personal performance in your behalf.

Historic Preservation Board: Submitted

Interests & ExperiencesWhy are you interested in serving on a board or commission?

 My relevant interests and experiences are discussed in the Bio/Resume which is already on file with the City of Coral Gables (most recently from 2021 and updated in May 2022 when I applied to serve as Docent at the City of Coral Gables Merrick House [CGMH]). That Resume is current with the exception that it does not include my CGMH volunteer work from Mid-2022 to the present.  It has been a pleasure serving the residents of Coral Gables for nearly six years as a member of the City's Historic Preservation Board, and it would be an honor to continue doing so, should the City Commission choose to re-appoint me.

Bruce Ehrenhaft, a resident of Coral Gables since 1991, has a BA degree with a major in Biology, an MA degree with an emphasis in Photography, and a JD degree.

Since childhood he has maintained a keen interest in the architectural, archeological and ecological resources in and surrounding the communities where he has resided or worked.

Those interests began when in the 1950's and early 1960's Bruce was raised in Iowa City, the old Territorial Capital of Iowa. There was a rich history of Woodlands Native American populations who had lived in the region; and dating from the period of westward expansion by European settlers there were still existing wonderful examples of log pioneer homes and more permanent limestone and brick structures dating from the 1840's. Bruce was also fascinated by the large inventory of other 19th and 20th Century residential, commercial, and institutional buildings in various styles throughout the community. During this same mid-20th Century period - - characterized by urban growth, construction of single-family tract housing and shopping malls, and pressure for urban renewal - - Bruce was impressed by successful calls to action from throughout the community which resisted wholesale demolition of older structures inside and outside the urban core. The result was that large portions of the architectural fabric in the City's historic downtown were sensitively restored for adaptive reuse, and, simultaneously, entire neighborhoods comprised of 19th and early 20th Century residential structures throughout the City were preserved, intact. Also intrigued by architectural designs from masters like Louis Sullivan and Frank Lloyd Wright in surrounding regions, Bruce contemplated becoming an architect, but instead chose the study of biology and other sciences.

After working as a physiology research assistant in Iowa and Alaska, and on the staff of a research laboratory located in an Alaskan Inuit community, Bruce served as an assistant during a 4-month survey of archeological sites along the arctic coasts of Canada and Alaska. Later, after working as a medical photographer in a university hospital's pathology department and as a technician in its blood bank and transfusion service collecting and preparing blood components for individuals in the general patient population and for others in an NIH clinical leukemia study, Bruce did hospital based technical and educational services work throughout Spain, the Caribbean and Latin America for two American medical manufacturers. In 1985 he changed careers, studied law, and was a staff attorney for the U.S. District Court in Miami for 24 years.

Upon his retirement in July 2014 Bruce re-embraced his interests in archeology, ecology, and architecture, and their importance to the fabric of communities, by joining the Advocacy Committee of Dade Heritage Trust (DHT). In November 2015 he became a member of DHT's Board of Directors; and he is a member of the National Trust for Historic Preservation. His related activities included attendance at Municipal and County HP/HEP Board and Commission Meetings, and neighborhood meetings in Miami Dade County. They also have included attendance at various seminars, training sessions, and charrettes presented and/or hosted by the National Trust, Florida Trust, American Institute of Architects, Southeast Florida Regional Climate Change Compact, DHT, Miami Design Preservation League, the Florida Department of State's Bureau of Historic Preservation (BHP) and Division of Historical Resources (DHR) and the National Alliance of Preservation Commissions (NACP), and a Florida DHR 2-day Regional Certified Local Government Historic Preservation Training in Miami.

Bruce has been a member of the Coral Gables Historic Preservation Board since 2017, and served as its Chair for one term (2019 - 2020).
