Venny Torre is president and CEO of Torre Development Group Inc., a full service real estate development, construction management, and certified general contracting company. He is also the owner and president of Network Investments of South Florida, a real estate brokerage company. Additionally, he is currently a partner and managerially involved in several commercial and real estate development projects throughout Central and South Florida.

Mr. Torre's career in real estate, construction and development is very extensive and diversified, having started working in the construction field at the young age of fifteen. His first position was a field job with Trafalgar Developers of Florida, the company who developed Fontainebleau Park in West Miami Dade County during the Seventies. It was there that he gained a lot of field experience while finishing school. After graduating from University of Florida's School of Building Construction he was hired as a project manager by The Graham Companies, the developers and builders of the Town of Miami Lakes. While working there his responsibilities included the management of many real estate development projects and the construction of a variety of office parks, retail strips, hotels, condominiums, apartments, industrial warehouses, and other commercial and residential projects.

In 1991 Mr. Torre became a partner in U.S. Construction Corp., a successful commercial and residential general contracting firm based in South Florida. The company grew during his tenure there and in 1997 he purchased the company. Just a few of his clients included American Express, Metro PCS, State Farm Insurance, The Allen Morris Company, The Graham Companies and many others. In 2003 after a successful 6 years of ownership Mr. Torre sold the company in order to diversify his career towards more development projects.

Over the course of the last 15 years, Mr. Torre has also personally and jointly been involved in many commercial and residential real estate development ventures which include commercial office buildings, warehouses, apartments, townhouses, high end multi-family residences and historical properties. He holds a Bachelor's degree in Building Construction from the University of Florida as well as an Associate in Arts in Architecture Degree. Mr. Torre is a Certified Florida Licensed General Contractor as well a Florida licensed real estate broker. He resides in Coral Gables, Florida with his wife and daughter.
