A Resolution of the City Commission designating the 300 block of Aragon Avenue as "Nino Perneti Way" in honor of Caffè Abbracci owner Nino Perneti.

(Sponsored by Mayor Lago)

Perneti was born in post-World War II Italy, in the tiny town of Campione, which was a 30-minute ride on his father's bicycle from the nearest town. One of eight children, Perneti lost his mother at age 3 when both contracted typhus. When Perneti survived, doctors nicknamed him "cabrito," little goat.

Perneti discovered his interest in hospitality while working in a small bed-and-breakfast in the touristy town of Limone. He used the job to pay for three years of high school in a town eight miles away, before enrolling in hospitality school, where he found he preferred working the front of the house to the kitchen. He spent the next 15 years working in some of the top hotels in Europe, the Middle East and Latin America--learning new languages everywhere he went.

In 1987, Perneti opened his first restaurant, Caffè Baci, in Coral Gables, a lively spot where people came to see and be seen. Two year later, Perneti opened Caffè Abbracci just a few blocks away, he found guests preferred to dine wherever he was situated. Nino was the draw.

He soon realized he preferred the more intimate Abbracci and closed Baci to focus on giving his diners all of himself. Perneti projected an air of discretion, personally and at his restaurant. He was an avid reader, and lover of knowledge, and spent countless evenings conversing warmly with his patrons in up to seven different languages. He was well-known and well-loved by the Coral Gables community and greater South Florida region, and many affluent, influential, and famous locals were regulars at Caffè Abbracci. In fact, on January 22, 2019, Nino Perneti was awarded a Key to the City by Coral Gables Mayor Raul Valdes-Fauli for his contributions to the culinary fabric of the City.

Perneti contracted COVID-19 in December 2020, just days after a forthcoming vaccine was announced and struggled with the side effects of the virus for more than a year. He passed away from complications on May 31, 2022. Yet even in the hospital, he continued reading voraciously and sending texts to his managers at Caffè Abbracci when he couldn't speak.

The Miami-Dade County Commission proclaimed March 14, 2022, Nino Perneti Day, and presented a plaque to his daughters, Tatiana and Katerina, as well as his ex-wife Marlén Perneti. Perneti is survived by siblings Diego, Olivo and Lucia in Italy, and his daughters, Tatiana and Katerina, in Miami.

The City Commission wishes to recognize Nino Perneti, the long-time business owner of Café Abbracci, by designating the 300 Block of Aragon Avenue as "Nino Perneti Way."
